LOUISVILLE.

TUESDAY, JAN. 16, 1855.

☞The Washington correspondent of the N. Y. Courier and Enquirer states that Secretary Guthrie has adopted a sumptuary list, consisting of cut glass, ready-made clothing, wines, and other luxuries, of which he offers to make a 30 or 40 per cent. schedule, as a compromise between the extremes in Congress. This amiable concession upon the part of the Secretary has been no doubt induced by the importunate clamors of the free-trade section of his party. The proceedings of the late caucus held by the free-tradists in Congress indicate a disposition to spare no efforts to carry a modification of the present tariff. Whether the proposed compromise of the Secretary of the Treasury will conciliate these unmitigated radicals, or have sufficient strength to combine the support of the Whigs with that of the moderate and rational Democrats, or whether it will serve only to heighten existing discord in the ranks of the majority without attracting the favor of the minority, and thus defeat all action upon the question for the present, is a matter of very interesting speculation. We still incline to favor the latter possibility.

As we have already said, we do not believe that the Administration itself is particularly anxious for a modification of the tariff in any form that will materially diminish the revenue, and we have too great confidence in the firmness and integrity of the Secretary of the Treasury to believe that he will ever consent to a modification in the interests of naked free-trade, however specious and pressing its advocates may prove. He has too much sagacity to be inveigled by the words of others, and too much spirit to swallow his own. If he stands by the principles and views enunciated in his report, as he undoubtedly will, we see no reason to doubt that the revision of the tariff will be consigned to the succeeding Congress, as we think it should be, and as we hope it will be.

The complete adoption of the Secretary's scheme of modification would at best prove but a partial remedy for the commercial evils that afflict us, and a very imperfect preventive of the greater calamities that threaten us. It would probably reduce the symptoms of financial derangement, but it would never reach the actual centre and seat of the disease. It might qualify the decline of the national prosperity, but it could never arrest it, and send it back along the shining track it is leaving. The exigencies of the case are too grave for such shallow treatment, and not sufficiently grave to render anything more perfect feasible at the moment. The experience of another year promises to bring round the public mind resistlessly to its periodical conviction of the ruinous tendency of all measures approximating freetrade, and to the correlative conviction that a discriminating but thorough system of protection is the only true policy of the nation, as it is the only safe pathway to commercial independence, and, through this, to absolute political freedom. The question may then be met and disposed of as the vital interests of the nation demand, and as we have an abiding faith that it will be. Until then, all tampering with the question will rather embarrass than promote its complete adjustment. We of course prefer the Secretary's plan of modification to any other likely to be adopted by the present Congress, and warmly approve it, so far as it goes, but we have larger hopes from a temporary postponement of the entire question than we have from any modification possible at present.

In the mean time, our best wishes are with the sturdy Secretary in his battle with the visionary freetradists of Congress. He is a living and cheering illustration of the irrepressible vitality of native instincts under the pressure of vicious inculcations and the imperious restrictions of party discipline. His position is a false one, but his conduct is loyal to the early, uncorrupted dictates of his judgment. When he wars against the dogmas of his party, it is simply nature protesting against the abortions of man. His inevitable advocacy of protection is one of the most striking of those involuntary tributes that truth perpetually extorts from error. We hail it as the auspicious harbinger of a new era in legislation.

The case of young Lacoste, on trial at Havana for the part he took in the Baracoa fillibustering affair, derives fresh interest from the later Havana news we get via New Orleans. The probability is that he will be condemned to death, but it is not less probable, we are glad to be assured, that the Captain-General will remit his sentence to imprisonment. Good policy, if not mercy, should dictate that course. Indeed, if the Captain-General would go a little further, and grant the prisoner an unconditional pardon, we hazard little in saying his magnanimity would do more to discourage future raids upon the island than a thousand executions would do. N. Y. Express.

We should certainly be very glad to see young Lacoste pardoned, but we are constrained to doubt whether such magnanimity would "discourage future raids upon Cuba." The experiment of magnanimity has been tried and proved a failure. When the followers of Lopez were held in confinement, the U. S. Goverument solicited their release, and the belief was very general, that, in the event of their release, the noble conduct of the Spanish Government would secure Cuba against subsequent invasion. Well, they were released, and the Queen of Spain even went so far as to supply one of them with more than funds enough to pay his expenses home. Yet this generosity, far from having the effect to discourage further expeditions against Cuba, seemed greatly to encourage them. Such expeditions have been projected and contemplated ever since, and the Administration at Washington has been under the necessity of exercising constant vigilance to prevent their getting off. Of course we shall not think it at all surprising if the Spanish authorities come to the conclusion that magnanimity is no protection to them against fillibusters, and that they have manifested quite as much of it as they can well afford.

Upon the whole, this message, which is considered tame at Washington, has at least the merit of being inoffensive abroad. It is not very correct in its language, or very statesmanlike in its views; it leaves the more difficult questions of the policy of the United States unsolved; but it furnishes fresh evidence of the prosperity of the country, and nothing is more creditable to the institutions of the United States than the fact that the affairs of the Commonwealth do not suffer materially even in the hands of those who have but small claims to political foresight or ability.

This is just and searching. They have found it out, as the simpleton said to his mother. The world sees that our President is a numskull, and it is folly longer to attempt its concealment at home. We all, Democrats and Whigs, might as well blush and own up.

☞The Louisville Democrat says that "the Whigs were once a proud party." We suppose he means the time when he was one of them. Of course they were proud then, for they had him to be proud of. He says they had at that time "a triumphant banner," meaning, no doubt, the Whig banner that waved to the battle and the breeze over his dirty old school-house.

The Democrat intimates that the Whigs are no longer a proud party. Are the Democrats? What have they to be proud of except the overwhelming, crushing, smashing, grinding, pulverizing, and annihilating defeats that they have sustained in nearly all the late elections and are likely to sustain in nearly all that are to come?

☞The Courier published a few days ago a list of supposed aspirants to the office of Governor of Kentucky at the next election, in which is embraced the name of our fellow-citizen, Hon. Humphrey Marshall. We happen to know that Mr. Marshall, so far from being an aspirant to that office, has constantly declined to permit the use of his name to his friends, though solicited to do so from various quarters of the State; and we are at liberty to state that he has no wish to be considered by his fellow-citizens of Kentucky as one to whom the office of Governor would be desirable, or to be presented in any connection with it before any convention or meeting. Mr. Marshall is engaged in the practice of law in this city and the adjacent counties.

☞It was stated in a paragraph in the Journal of yesterday that the suit of Mr. Baird against the city for his per diem was first decided by the chancery court in favor of Mr. B. This was a mistake. The case was decided by the circuit court and in the absence of Judge Bullock.

☞The Democrat notices the fact of our not having published the proceedings of a late meeting of the Whigs of Nelson county. We have not seen them. When we do we shall publish them of course.

To the Editors of the Louisville Journal:

THE MEMPHIS AIR-LINE ROAD—MR. "BRIDGE."

GENTLEMEN: Your brilliant correspondent "Bridge," who evidently plunged into matters of which he knew nothing, makes a lame effort in your paper of Monday to relieve himself from the difficulties into which his hot haste and carelessness threw him. I shall spend but little time upon him, as the impotence of his second is quite an effective offset to the wild recklessness of his first effort.

He distinctly stated in his first essay that "no well-constructed railroad in Kentucky had been built for less than $40,000 per mile." I pointed to the Louisville and Frankfort railroad as an excellent and substantial road which has cost less than $25,000. "Bridge" was thus fairly cornered. There was no possible escape from the point on which he was thus irretrievably transfixed, and he felt this so forcibly that he fairly cried out. "Ah!" says this sapient enlightener of the public mind, "do you call that a sample of your air-line?" He had not said that there was not a sample air-line road in Kentucky that had been built for less than $40,000, but sneaks off from the exposure of his "reckless assertion" by asking if the Frankfort road is a sample of our air-line road? Poor "Bridge" was caught in a tight place, and even his genius for reckless assertion was, for once, at fault. Why even the Lexington and Covington road, with grades of only 30 feet to the mile, cost but $32,000 per mile, which is $8,000 a mile less than Mr. "Bridge" wildly asserted when his wings first undertook to bear him from the regions of fact. But this sniggering about the Frankfort railroad shall not avail this champion of the Nashville railroad anything. The Frankfort railroad and a portion of the Nashville railroad are before this community, and there is not one sensible man in this city who will not, arter inspecting, pronounce the structure of the Frankfort road far more substantial than that of the Nashville road. "Bridge" should not invite these comparisons. Again: "Bridge" sneers at the deflections of the Frankfort road. And what are the facts about that model enterprise which undertakes to paralyse all other public works in this region—the Nashville railroad?

Sneers at the deflections of the Frankfort road come with an ill grace from this volunteer champion of the Nashville road. The deflection of the Nashville road at Shepherdsville is nearly as far from a straight line to Bowlinggreen as the road at Lagrange is from a straight line between Louisville and Frankfort. At Munfordsville the deflection of the Nashville road from a straight line is much greater than any on the Frankfort road. And I repeat, in positive contradiction to "Bridge," that no railroad in Kentucky has cost $40,000 per mile, and there are but few in the West that have cost that sum.

"Bridge" wishes to know what Mr. Taylor's "Christianity" has to do with his estimates for building railroads, and I confess that "Bridge" would have fairly caught me by that question if I had pretended to know. He must seek information from Gov. Helm on this subject. When Gov. Helm was commending Mr. Taylor, in a public speech to the citizens of Louisville, as the civil engineer of the Nashville road, he mentioned Mr. Taylor's Christianity among his qualifications, and as that was the endorsement of Gov. Helm, I did not, although I could not understand it, think it was right to omit that trait.

But I fear that "Bridge" has undertaken a larger load than he can carry, in his attempts to relieve himself from Mr. Taylor's affidavit. I truly represented Mr. Taylor's affidavit respecting the Lebanon branch, and "Bridge" very untruly represents it. Mr. Taylor did not confine his estimates of $13,000 per mile to the mere grading, as "Bridge" recklessly asserts, but swore that the road could be not only made ready for the iron, but be ironed for that amount. When "Bridge" tries his hand at this business again, he may help himself some little by reading Mr. Taylor's affidavit, that is, if he has any kind of solicitude as to the character of his statements. He will find that Mr. Taylor is very specific as to the portion of the route which is to be completed at $13,000 per mile. In reaching Pottinger's creek the work is very heavy; the river has to be crossed twice with expensive bridges, and from the junction to the county line of Marion nearly all the work is very expensive. In his affidavit, Mr. Taylor states that this can be completed for $13,000 per mile. As "Bridge" is well posted in the matters of the Nashville railroad office, and should know all its secrets, he should not again have imperiled his reputation by guessing his way through facts. "Bridge" palpably shows one of two things: he either did not know what Mr Taylor had sworn, or he designedly misrepresents the affidavit, and I shall not charge that the latter is the horn of the dilemma on which this "Bridge" shall swing.

"Bridge" rather sneers at Mr. Taylor's estimates as an answer to his wild and sweeping statement about the railroads of Kentucky costing $40,000 per mile. When confronted with the actual cost of the Frankfort road, he sniggers and flounders and asks: "Ah, is that a sample air-line road?" as if he had said that model air-line roads in Kentucky cost $40,000 per mile. When we appeal to the oath of the engineer of the Nashville Railroad as to the cost of the branch road to Lebanon, he rather sneers at Mr. Taylor, utterly falsifies his affidavit, and insinuates that the sworn estimates of the engineer of the Nashville road road are of no value. And this same "Bridge," who wishes Louisville to spend more money on that style of engineering, impudently says the friends of the air-line road are required to go it blind! Verily the Nashville railroad has a genius for a champion. If he could convert his capital of brass into financial means, he might build the Nashville road. So much for this attempt of "Bridge" to escape the effects of Mr. Taylor's affidavit, as engineer of the Nashville Railroad, as to the cost per mile of building the Lebanon branch.

"Bridge" flounders terribly in my exposure of his statements about the railroad ordinance before the council, but as he rather exposes himself in his attempts to work his way out of his difficulty, he might be left to his festering wounds. Instead of that deplorable blindness which he falsely charged upon those members of the council who were advocating the railroad ordinance, he admits that they were guarding the treasury. "Bridge" does not attempt to sustain his statements that the council were "giving to impossible air-lines and unexplored routes," and he thus confesses that that was an assertion which he could not sustain. Alas for the broken "Bridge!" Alas for a "Bridge" without abutments! The empty compliments of such a "Bridge" to Mr. Ripley's municipal wisdom must make that gentleman feel supremely happy. But here is the ordinance matter in a nut shell. "Bridge" represented that members of the council were engaged in an attempt to "give" away public money "to impossible air-lines and unexplored routes." This was nothing less than a most scandalous calumny, manufactured for the occasion. "Bridge" was pinned to the wall and tries to wriggle himself from some little of this slander by a jingle of words about grades and curves. But this shall not avail him. The ordinance, in complete refutation of this slander, provided: "That the road must be graded and bridged, the cross-ties in readiness for the superstructure, and a committee on the part of the city must be satisfied with the work before a bond could be issued."

The bonds were to be used exclusively for the purchase of iron, and the city received a mortgage on all the work and materials. But "Bridge," being caught in a tight place, attempts to squirm himself out by pretending that the Memphis air-line road might get into the hands of fools who might give it such steep grades as to make it useless! Wonderful "Bridge!" In that case would not the mortgage on the iron and cross-ties give the city ample security? Or better still, might not the ordinance be so amended as to require the Memphis air-line road to be graded and prepared by the managers of the Nashville railroad? Would not that secure easy grades and a most beautiful railroad?

The exposures which have been already made of the reckless and wild assertions of "Bridge" should have cured him of his propensity in that way, but he madly rushes into the business again. With amusing self-complacency "Bridge" asserts: "I said, and still say, that, reasoning upon all the information which has been obtained upon the two routes, and from our knowledge of the country, the Nashville road offers as cheap and direct a communication to coal." Well, I said, and say again, that there is no foundation for such a wild and reckless assertion. There is not one fact to which "Bridge" can appeal that will sustain his rash assertion. Mr. Robinson's report shows that coal cannot be reached by a railroad from the Elizabethtown road, while the reconnoisance of Messrs. Lee and Newell shows that a cheap and direct route through sixty miles of coal and iron fields is on the "air line road." And in view of the fact that two railroad engineers have made this reconnoisance, "Bridge" is entirely contemptible in his statement that the public is asked to go "blindly" into this enterprise. In defiance of Mr. Robinson's instrumental survey, "Bridge" has the hardihood to assert that we can reach coal-fields by the Nashville road, and when asked to prove his statement, he coils up and declares that he has said it, and by way of proving it, will say it again! The reports of Messrs. Newell, Lee, and Livermore on the character of the country through which the air-line road is to be built, have been published in this city and may safely defy the assaults of "Bridge" and his abettors. Until he can successfully meet the facts of those reports, he should assume modesty enough to curb his propensity for unsupported assertion.

"Bridge" thinks that while this air-line road is occupying public attention, the Nashville road stands a chance of failing in construction. What does he mean? The citizens of Louisville, notwithstanding this air-line road project, will pay all they agreed to pay toward the building of the Nashville road, and the air-line project is not, therefore, interfering with that. But if "Bridge" means that the Nashville road will have to seek further aid from Louisville, there may be some reason in his fears. There is no fact more perfectly fixed, I think, than the indisposition of the citizens of Louisville to give any additional aid, under present circumstances, to the Nashville road. There is an opposition to that, which cannot be successfully resisted, as "Bridge" and his advisers will find to their dismay when the attempt is made.

"Bridge" does not deny the correctness of my quotation from Mr. Robinson's report as to the height of Muldrough's hill, and the grades to Elizabethtown. He shows that Mr. Robinson gives a different height and different grades in another part of his report. Be it so. It is a matter of small concern.

When "Bridge" is again seized with a feverish anxiety to advance the interests of the Nashville railroad, he will find an advantage in keeping his miserable twattle about the air-line road to himself. Those who understand the invaluable character of that enterprise will not tamely submit to such attacks as he makes upon that road. He has made but little headway yet in his reckless statements, nor is it likely that he will improve by further efforts. He must not again conclude that, because he is wilfully "blind" on the subject of the air-line road, everybody else is as blind as himself. QUIVIS.

Arrest of the Murderer of Officer Beebe.—The Columbus Statesman has information which induces the belief that a desperado calling himself Morgan, of Licking county, who murdered officer Beebe last summer, was arrested a few days since at St. Louis, by the instigation of one who knew him. Officers left Columbus to examine into the matter.

OWENSBORO, Ky., Dec. 17, 1854.

Rev. H. H. Hopkins:

DEAR SIR: We had the pleasure on last Sabbath of hearing your valuable sermon upon the subject of our personal relations in life, preached from the text, "Am I my Brother's Keeper?"

We are of opinion that its publication would be the means of doing a great deal of good in correcting the false notions that are entertained respecting the personal responsibility of mankind, and, if you will yield to the desire of the undersigned in furnishing us with a copy for publication, you will confer a favor upon us as well as upon all who may read it.

Very respectfully,
JOHN TODD,
S. M. WING,
DANIEL M. GRIFFITH,
A. B. JOHNSON,
W. B. VEGRAM,
JAMES WEIR,
R. W. MURRAY,
D. F. TODD,
J. B. ANDERSON.

To Dr. John Todd, S. M. Wing, and others:

GENTLEMEN: I have received your note requesting a copy of the sermon alluded to in the same. In compliance with your request I have written out the substance of it as far as recollected. You will possibly find some thoughts in the written discourse which were not in the verbal delivery of it, and vice versa.

Yours, &c. H. H. HOPKINS.
Dec. 23, 1854.

AM I MY BROTHER'S KEEPER?—Genesis, 4: 9.

This is the language of Cain to his Maker. When God inquired of him, "Where is Abel, thy brother?" he falsely and insolently replied, "I know not; am I my brother's keeper?" This impious repudiation of all care and all responsibility for his brother is the expression of a feeling by far too common among mankind. In this conduct of Cain we see how sins go in troops. Here is first murder, then falsehood, and after that a reprobate insolence.

The proposition which I draw from this text is, that all men stand in the relation of danger or safety to each other. From this responsibility there is no escape. It is a part of our moral obligations, and of consequence it is a part of our very existence.

But first, let us notice some of those responsibilities which are created by blood and conjugal affinities. And first of all, parents stand in the relation of keepers to their children—bodily and mentally, temporally and spiritually, they are responsible to a very great degree. As to the bodies of their children, what, of all things temporal, can be of so much importance to them as a sound mind in a sound body. To have the body developed as to bone and muscle and fibre and vigor to the utmost of which the constitution will admit is one of the noblest fortunes which falls to the lot of any young man or woman. But how falsely and how fatally do many parents act in this respect. False affection and ignorance of the physical laws of health do their work silently but surely upon the youthful constitution.

It is by the ordination of God that parents are made the keepers of their children's future health, strength, and enjoyment, yet the hand that plants disease in many a strong constitution is the hand of a parent. The long and lingering years of feebleness and misery have all been measured and made by false tenderness. Why should parents wonder, and why should they attribute it to some mysterious providence, when the citadel of their children's health falls prostrate at the attack of the feeblest foe? It was their own hands which sapped the walls and laid the train by which the dreadful work was done.

If you would, therefore, be the faithful and conscientious keepers of your children's health and happiness, banish all frivolous timidity of heat and cold, of sunshine and of rain. Let the bold and invigorating blasts of heaven deal freely and familiarly with them every day. Let the sun paint his vermilion upon their cheeks. Give them liberty to face all weathers which nature has given them hearts to brave. Let them enjoy in all sensible and proper degrees the blood-stirring air and exercise of life. And as they have this boundless air, cold or warm, rough or severe, they ordinarily glow with health and beauty. Let finical mothers consider that what they call delicacy, without health, is a sham, and that beauty without the substratum of durability is a false flag to seduce the unwary. If external beauty be an object to be sought, let us have the bold, brave beauty of animated health.

That parents are the keepers of their children's mental and moral qualifications is a fact so usually admitted that I propose to say but little on this point. It is however the greatest and the noblest work to which parents are appointed by Providence. To stamp upon the tablet of the human mind those great and eternal principles of divine revelation which so exalt and so purify it here, and which alone fit it for the realms of another life—to rear upon that imperishable foundation the great structure of knowledge, of morals, and religion, which distinguished man above all the other portions of this terene creation—transcends all other achievements of human effort as far as the heavens transcend the earth. He or she who writes truth and honor, religion and knowledge upon the great volume of the human soul, writes indeed for eternity. Such works will be published in heaven and bound in editions that will never pass away.

2d. Husbands and wives are the mutual keepers of each others' welfare and happiness. The total abandonment and negation of this responsibility comes most frequently however from the husband. How absolutely does he hold his wife's happiness or misery in his hand! If he be a gambler he wastes her substance, dishonors her name, debauches and debases his own mind and character, and renders himself an unfit companion for her or for home. If he be an inebriate he destroys her means of support, ruins both his mind and body, and puts himself at utter war with the feelings and spirit of a genial and contented home. And what right has the duelist, from heaven above or from the earth beneath, to make his wife a widow and his children orphans in obedience to a code which is the most diabolical in its nature, and which is the most cruel and most pernicious in its consequences? But he, the mad and miserable victim of an honor, false and damnable in all its aspects, rushes with dreadful facility upon death. Is it not the simplest dictate of justice that God should hold such men to a responsibility extending far beyond their own personal ruin—a responsibility comprehending all the related agonies of wives and children and all the long years of diversified misery over which their woes have run? God has commanded men to love their wives and cherish them, and he will hold them to an inescapable account for the dreadful years of slow and barbarous murder which they have inflicted upon them.

II. Let us notice how men stand related to each other in civil society.

1st. Each community is the keeper or destroyer of its own welfare. But how great the number is who never think of their community in any other respect than that of gain. To get out of it the largest amount possible and to return to it the least amount possible comprehends the whole of their morals, their religion, their intelligence, and their liberality. To build churches, to establish schools, and to promote all that tends to advance the mind and purify the heart, to exalt the public intelligence and public morals, are things so far beyond their grasp and so contrary to the habits of their narrow souls that all attempts to render them appreciable would be vain. Such men contemptuously ask—"am I my brother's keeper?" Yet it is just those men in any community who ever live and act upon the principle of their keepership to others, who give it all its personal and commercial honor, all its position and all its standing at home and abroad, all that renders it desirable as a place to live, and all that renders it prospectively thrifty and prosperous to the hopes of the present time. It is the character of the high-minded and right-minded men of this community that protects it from utter deterioration in morals and from utter prostration in wealth. They are far more absolutely the keepers of these invaluable elements than a garrison is the keeper of a citadel. And if all the men of this class were to leave it and abandon it to dram-shops and dram-drinkers, to gin-traps doggery-masters, what would be the intelligence and moral character left, and what would be the value of real estate in such a sink and Sodom of iniquity? The real wealth and vitality of a place consist essentially in the good character of its inhabitants. The vampires of society, who are ever sucking the blood of its prosperity, owe entirely the value of their property and the safety of their lives to the high character of the better men and better things by which they are surrounded.

2d. Let us turn our attention to the various occupations of men. And the first we notice is the business of liquor-selling. Amongst the things indispensable to a prosperous and comfortable condition of society are the various trades and productive operations of human labor. These give us an equivalent, or at least a valuable substitute for the money or matters of traffic which we spend in their purchase. The artistical value of such occupations can hardly be estimated by gold. Besides, when high moral character adorns the artizan, he constitutes a part of that loftier element of strength and prosperity which goes further to bless and honor a community than anything else. Such men are their brothers' keepers.

But now let us turn to the occupation of the liquor seller. And, in the first place, it is the only regular and standing occupation of men outside of the penitentiary which requires no moral character. It is indeed a business in which moral character seems out of place. To feel free and easy and at home in the management of a gin-trap—to be coaxing, insinuating, and successful as a dram-seller, requires a total divorce from all the troublesome intrusions and annoyances of moral feeling. Conscience is an unwelcome visitant in any such place or in any such traffic. Cain is the fit exemplar of such an occupation.

But as a matter of political and moral economy it may be asked, what would our country lose in wealth if every dram-shop in its whole boundaries were suddenly and forever sunk beneath the earth, and what would it lose in morals and intellect if their masters went down whole into the pit with them. We leave these somewhat profound questions to be answered by those who deal in liquor licenses and who purchase death and desolation for the people for a few paltry dollars.

But, 2d, what is the productive value of liquor selling to any place or province? What communities has it ever helped to clothe or warm, to educate and enlighten? What society has it ever elevated, or what people has it ever advanced in any of the great moral and physical elements of wealth and prosperity? Let thousands upon thousands of wretches in every land, whom it has ruined, answer this question. Let widows and orphans, let haggard poverty and raging madness, let brawls and murders and death, let diseases and fallen fortunes and cruel sufferings, let theft and falsehood and idleness, ever meditative of guilt, let prison-houses and mad-houses, let character destroyed and character begotten, luxuriant in all that woes and crimes can do, and in all that man can suffer, and, finally, let the dishonored grave, the resting-place of bodily beastliness, sufferings, and crime—let all these tell us, if they can, what is the productive value of the liquor seller's trade.

Let the legislators of our country ask and answer this question. Let good and thoughtful men shape this matter to the best of ends. We want our legislators, our lawyers, our doctors, our editors, and our ministers of truth and righteousness; we want our merchants, our tradesmen, and all men who directly or indirectly promote the moral and physical welfare of our country. But who can ask of us to uphold a business whose results are pure, unmingled evil? As the keepers of our brethren we cannot do it. Who can expect us to set these deadfalls of perdition, or to look on while others do it? Who can ask us to set up and to keep up this business of death in the midst of our sons and other young men who look to us for defence and protection against this all-devouring curse? Who can require us to put this agent of ruin and dishonor upon a par with the other occupations of men around us? Nay; but on the contrary let all good men, let all true and faithful friends to their country hold this business of death to our brother in utter abhorrence. And never, no never let the eye of the good man be familiar with the inside of that house, nor his foot familiar with that door where husbands are made drunkards and where wives are made widows. Am I my brother's keeper, should be the label upon the door of every gin-trap in the world.

3d. The world at large stands in the relation of danger or safety to our seamen, our boatmen, and our roadmen. These are in an especial sense the keepers or the destroyers of the public life and property. But how have the moral and natural sensibilities of this nation been shocked at the recent wicked and horrible destruction of human life in the steamers Arctic and New Era? In regard to the Arctic there is but one uncontradicted report and one sentiment of universal condemnation for the crew of that vessel. The lives were not only great in number but they were great in value in every sense in which human life can be regarded as valuable. They were both of men and of women the very elite of society. There were numbered in that company the moral, the religious, and the learned; the refined, the accomplished, the noble-hearted, and the generous. There too were all the natural and all the tenderest relations of life. There were husbands and there wives, parents and their children, brothers and their sisters, social friendships and relations of every grade. And just in the neighborhood of home, with health renewed and hearts flashing with hope and bounding with joy and exhilarated with the fullest swells of emotion, they anticipate the friends ashore and already embrace them with the most ardent cordiality and affection. They had their presents for children and friends all safely stored away to be delivered at the time appropriate to enlarge the realms of affection and delight. Their imaginations were warm and busy with the joys of days to come—the histories and events of foreign travel to be related—with knowledge increased and views enlarged and rectified, and all to be employed to greater advantage and usefulness in future years. The Christian in fancy was already at his own hearth-stone sending up his praise for deliverance from the perils of the deep.

But alas! just as the sun of hope passed up the skies almost to the zenith, the crash of death was heard. The hearts of many no doubt failed them in that terrific hour—others braced themselves to face their doom with whatever of fortitude they had, while the Christian, cool in courage and steady in purpose, spoke out his words of truth and heavenly consolation to others amid the horrors of that undescribed and undescribable scene. What hopes, what fears, what confoundings of thought, and what overwhelming agonies were there. That was indeed to them the hour and power of darkness. Upon that moment was concentrated the woes of ages. When we attempt the conception of these things even with our dim and feeble appreciation of them, how unutterably deplorable does it appear that a body of people so large in number and so valuable in character should be compelled to commit their keeping to a set of men scarcely above the ferocity of pirates. The crew of that vessel—men fierce, devilish, and cowardly, thwarting all generous efforts to save women and children, rushed with mad and ferocious violence for the boats, dashing mothers and children and all that opposed them into the sea. Not a man of them stood to his post—not one of them did his duty. From this condemnation we must indeed exempt the noble-hearted young man who stood to his gun to the last, firing his melancholy signals of distress. It is a noble instance of the noble courage of duty. He stood for life or death to his post. He fared, too, as well as those who betrayed their trust. They left many to perish but they could not save themselves. Yet it is to the keeping of such men that the world has to commit its lives and its commerce. None but God alone can tell the ever secret history of the President, the City of Glasgow, and other such dreadful disasters.

But we need not go beyond our own and other Western rivers to find the great and fearful responsibilities of life and property, if not entirely contemned, at least recklessly endangered and often recklessly destroyed. We desire to exempt the careful, the competent, and the worthy from public condemnation. On the contrary, did we know who they are, we would like to hold up their names and their characters for public approbation. But it is well known to you, my hearers, that from your own wharf you often commit yourselves and families and property to the keeping of men who, by education, by habits of mind and habits of conduct, by position and by associations, are totally unworthy of such very great and far-reaching trusts. The qualifications of the men who manage our steamboats have never yet drawn to them the public attention and the public scrutiny which their boundless importance demands. That these men should be qualified by knowledge and experience to do what their trade requires them to do is admitted by all. But there are requirements which are higher than these and still more essential. There are qualifications of the mind and the heart—an ever present sense of justice, of care, of interest, and of kindness—a moral character sufficiently strong and elevated to appreciate the value of life and property—habits of sobriety and habits of generous and careful sympathy with all the great and numerous interests committed to their keeping. The question therefore should be not so much what is the boat as who are its managers.

But what is the fact in regard to many of our boatmen? Reared as they have been in the midst of vice and vulgarity, roughness and rowdyism, profanity and profligacy, they are utterly destitute of all those moral and mental qualities which fit men to be the caretakers of each other. Such men are reckless of life and property. Insolent and vulgar in mind, they are insolent and vulgar in manners. Whoever sinks or swims with them is nothing beyond a profane or vulgar jest. They would scarcely turn upon their heel to save a man from a watery grave. But the blood of murdered men will cry to heaven against them as it did against Cain.

But what shall we say as to the great streams of travel upon the railroads of our country? To them also are committed untold responsibilities. But here too we find the same Satanic recklessness and disregard of life and property. Life is no longer a sacred and a precious thing when put into the keeping of these men of blood and cruelty. Ignorance and vice, exalted into a fancied and temporary importance, rush with mad and murderous velocity into the trains of each other. Many are killed, many are crippled, and many are rendered sufferers for life. These deadly and frightful events are constantly and alarmingly on the increase wherever there are great lines of railroads. And, in view of these ever-multiplying disasters, these murderous draughts of life and limb and happiness, it becomes a moral and political question whether these roads, as now managed, be not a curse rather than a blessing to our country.

But, it may be asked—what can be done to remedy this dreadful condition of things? What shall defend us against these terrible exposures and wholesale murders? To this it may be answered that any laws necessary should be passed to give all such catastrophes of ships, steamboats, and railroad cars the most searching examination, and whatever penalties may be attached to murder and manslaughter elsewhere, let them be attached here.

But our main hope, and the only one which promises great things here, as well as elsewhere, is the moral and intellectual elevation of youth. Put the Bible into the hands of the young everywhere—let them imbibe its principles, and let them learn and live under its great doctrines of personal responsibility both to God and man—let them learn the value of human life, how sacred a treasure it is, and how inappreciable a thing it is in the sight of God—let them learn from the great chart of life the kindness, the justice, and the care which they owe to others—let them learn from the lips of the Saviour to do unto others as they would have others do unto them—let them know that all the black attributes of sin and ignorance are not only crimes against God, but are also great disqualifications for all the important and responsible stations in life. Men must have a conscience to dictate duty and to deter from evil. And, without this, death will ever hang upon the rear of our trains, will work at the fires of our steamship and steamboat engines, or utter his mandates of destruction through other agents.

But while we have mentioned a few cases where responsibility stands out conspicuously to all eyes, yet it is true that society at large is bound together by bonds innumerable and by bonds indissoluble. All classes and all kinds of people, collectively and individually, stand responsible to results and accounts here and hereafter of the most blessed and of the most dreadful nature. Christ himself came into the world not only to do good and to save sinners but to make sinners, instrumentally at least, the saviors of each other. Christianity is the keeper of the world's hope.

But where are parents leading their children, where are teachers guiding their pupils? what stamp is the present generation giving to its successor? what truths or what falsehoods are authors instilling into the minds of their readers? No class of men should be held to a stricter account and upon none should be pronounced a more tremendous condemnation than upon bad authors. Under the honorable and almost unsuspicious colors of literature they attack the very foundations of truth and morals. And often with feebleness the most contemptible, and with harlotry of sentiment the most odious—praised by the press and sold in the shambles—they do their work of poison and imbecilitation upon the unwary mind of many an inexperienced youth.

Seeing, therefore, that these things are so, what an incentive of power should it ever be to the noblest efforts and highest examples! If they who turn many to righteousness shall shine as the stars forever and ever, surely they who lead many to perdition shall sink to a doom correspondingly dreadful.

Ohio River Land for Sale.
I offer for sale a superior Farm of about 460 acres, situated in Trimble county, Ky., immediately on the river, and about 30 miles above Louisville. Nearly one-half of the tract is rich bottom land, level and free from ravines, and only a few acres subject to the high overflows—some forty acres in timothy; and nearly all the bottom land could now be set in grass.
About 160 acres of the hill land lies well and is rich and adapted to the growth of corn, wheat, oats, or grass. Producing timothy or blue grass well, that portion which is too uneven for the plow is profitable for grazing. The timber on the hill land is very valuable.
Improvements consist of a substantial frame house, situated about 300 yards from the river, with 5 rooms, hall, and pantry and cellar: kitchen, servants'-rooms, ice-house, meat-house, cistern and a well of excellent water in the yard, corn-houses, a large hay-shed and press, stabling, &c.
Fine fruit, consisting of apples, peaches, plums, and cherries.
The Farm is now offered at private sale, and if not disposed of by Wednesday, the 14th day of February, it will then be sold at public auction, on which day the Corn, Stock, Farming Utensils, &c., will be sold.
Terms easy and may be known on application to myself, near Louisville, or to Henning & Speed, Real Estate Agents, Louisville, Ky.

Chemical Yeast or Baking Powder.
DURKEE'S CELEBRATED CHEMICAL YEAST OR BAKING POWDER, an article which should be used by every family in the land; and to all, whether high or low, rich or poor, it is equally useful and so economical as to render it as indispensable as flour to all who would have good bread; for it is the only thing which can be used with any certainty of having really light, sweet, and tender biscuit, griddle cakes, pudding, pastry, bread, &c., and is, besides, the cheapest and most healthy article that can be used for this purpose.
OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.
Those who have tried it have found that the advertisement does not sound its praise too highly.—Tallahassee Floridian and Journal, Feb. 19, 1852.
Housekeepers who have tasted the quality of this Powder pronounce unanimously in its favor.—Lockport Daily Courier.
It surpasses everything in the shape of "rising" we ever saw used in the baking of cakes.—Rahway Advocate and Register, April 15, 1853.
No one now hesitates to use Durkee's all-important article to housekeepers.—Republican Banner and Nashville Whig, Feb. 17, 1853.
We have tried this article and can recommend it with perfect confidence.—Quebec Gazette, July, 1853.
Durkee's Baking Powder we have tried at our house, and our "better half" was astonished at the result.—N. Y. Daily Times, Oct. 23, 1853.
All good housekeepers will rejoice in and glorify the name of Durkee after they have given his Baking Powder a fair trial.—N. Y. Sun, Sept. 30, 1852.

CHARLES'S LONDON CORDIAL GIN.
WITHOUT the necessity of extraordinary publicity, with scarcely an effort on the part of the proprietor, this superb Gin, in the short period which has elapsed since its introduction to the American public, has achieved a popularity beyond precedent in the whole list of alcoholic stimulants.
THE CERTIFICATES OF OVER FIVE THOUSAND PHYSICIANS in England and the United States proclaim its transcendent merits.
It is upon the sideboard of the family and the bar of every well-regulated hotel—by the bedside of the sick as well as the companion of the healthy. FREE FROM INTOXICATING QUALITIES, it is harmless in its adoption. The inebriate, by its use, finds it a slight stimulant, which, while it feeds the appetite, gradually weans him from the horrors of delirium, and restores a shattered constitution.
ITS GREAT REPUTATION IS DERIVED from its absolute purity, its delicious flavor—differing entirely from every other gin—its great utility as a medicine in cases of dyspepsia, gout, gravel, diseases of the kidneys, and innumerable other maladies, for which as a remedy and preventive it has no equal.
TO TRAVELERS IT IS INDISPENSABLY NECESSARY, dispelling the annoyances frequently engendered by change of water, etc., as also ague, fever, and malaria of every description.
CHARLES'S LONDON CORDIAL GIN is put up in square bottles, stamped with the proprietor's name, a fac simile signature upon the label, and packed in cases of two dozen each.

Liver Complaint,
JAUNDICE, DYSPEPSIA, CHRONIC OR NERVOUS DEBILITY, DISEASES OF THE KIDNEYS,
And all diseases arising from a Disordered Liver or Stomach, such as Constipation, Inward Piles, Fullness or Blood to the Head, Acidity of the Stomach, Nausea, Heart-burn, Disgust of Food, Fullness or Weight in the Stomach, Sour Eructations, Sinking or Fluttering at the Pit of the Stomach, Swimming of the Head, Hurried and Difficult Breathing, Fluttering at the Heart, Choking or Suffocating Sensations when in a lying posture, Dimness of Vision, Dots or Webs before the Sight, Fever and dull Pain in the Head, Deficiency of Perspiration, Yellowness of the Skin and Eyes, Pain in the Side, Back, Chest, Limbs, &c., Sudden Flushes of Heat, Burning in the Flesh, Constant Imagination of Evil, and great Depression of Spirits, can be effectually cured by
CELEBRATED GERMAN BITTERS,
Prepared by Dr. C. M. Jackson,
AT THE GERMAN MEDICINE STORE,
120 Arch street, Philadelphia.
Their power over the above diseases is not excelled, if equaled, by any other preparation in the United States, as the cures attest, in many cases after skillful physicians had failed.
These Bitters are worthy the attention of invalids. Possessing great virtues in the rectification of diseases of the liver and lesser glands, exercising the most searching powers in weakness of the digestive organs, they are withal safe, certain, and pleasant.
MORE SOUTHERN TESTIMONY.
They are unapproached by any other remedy now before the public for the cure of the above-named diseases.
H. W. CHANEY, Millersburg, Ky., Oct. 16, 1852, said: "Having sold your Bitters some time, I find it has given satisfaction in every instance that has come under my notice."
NELSON & EDWARDS, Salvisa, Ky., June 2, 1851, said: "We rejoice to inform you that this justly-celebrated medicine has fully maintained the exalted reputation which has been given it, and, having tested its virtues, we unhesitatingly say it eminently deserves it."
J. T. & J. W. BERRY, Uniontown, Ky., July 21, 1852, said: "We have heard of many cures performed by the use of Dr. Hoofland's German Bitters, and believe it to be a valuable medicine."
J. GRANT, Irvine, Ky., June 26, 1852, said: "We have succeeded in introducing your Hoofland Bitters; physicians and others purchase them by the half dozen and dozen."
DR. P. FATIO & BRO., Knoxville, Tenn., April 9, 1851, said: "Your Bitters are now selling very fast, and every person that has used it, so far as we have been able to learn, has been benefited."
DICKSON & GREEN, Alexandria, Ala., Sept. 30, 1852, said: "We have taken pains to introduce your German Bitters, and we find it to be a very valuable medicine."
C. A. ROBINSON, Bellefonte, Ala., Jan. 30, 1851, said: "Your medicines must eventually have a large sale; all those who used it in the fall liked it very much. The people have been much deceived here by trifling patent nostrums, and that affects the sale of your valuable Bitters, and will until it becomes known."
C. FOWLER, Tuskegee, Ala., January 1, 1851, said: "The Bitters are selling well, and I think they will continue to do so, as they give good satisfaction to those who have used them."
DR. H. P. LEONARD, Fayette C. H., Ala., Jan. 15, 1853, said: "Your bitters have done wonders in this section. A youth, a son of G. M. Hubbert, Esq., of this county, had been for several months under the care of our best practitioners without relief, and the case reported doubtful, and the young man, although scarcely able to get about, commenced with the Bitters. He found so much relief from the first bottle that he continued to take them until a complete cure was effected. He is now perfectly well and stout."
These Bitters are entirely vegetable, thereby possessing great advantage over most of the preparations recommended for similar diseases.
For sale by dealers in medicine everywhere.

Marshall's Uterine Catholicon.
T. POMEROY, M. D., inventor and proprietor. It is well known that Dr. Pomeroy, the discoverer of the justly celebrated Marshall's Uterine Catholicon, is one of the oldest and most skillful physicians in this country. The medicine, as prepared by him, has attained a reputation far beyond that ever awarded to any other medical preparation, and wherever it has been used it has needed no recommendation save its own beneficial effects.
Marshall's Uterine Catholicon is an invaluable remedy for diseases of the Womb and its appendages, Urinary Organs (as the Kidneys and Bladder), and diseases of Pregnancy, Prolapsus Uteri or Falling of the Womb, Leucorrhœa, Fluor Albus, all irregularities of the Periodical Turns, Suppressions and Flowing, diseased action of the Kidneys, and Bloating or Dropsical Swellings. Also, Spinal Complaints, so called, are generally the result of this class of complaints, and will disappear where they exist, in the same ratio as the Uterine are removed, diseases of Pregnancy, such as Acidity, Nausea, Vomiting, Indigestion and Faintings.
The controlling influence of Marshall's Uterine Catholicon over the above named diseases has been thoroughly tested.
The effect of the Catholicon, in cases decidedly of the character described, has been uniformly a cure; and what is most remarkable, they are not disposed to return.

AGENTS.

Messrs. Kennett, Dix, & Co., No. 70, Tchoupitoulas street, are our authorized agents in New Orleans. Those indebted to us in that city will please make payment to them.

Resignation of Mr. Soule—Hon. John C. Breckinridge his Successor.—The telegraph announces the resignation of Mr. Soule, our minister to Spain, and the appointment of Major Breckinridge, the present member of Congress from the Lexington district, as his successor.

☞It will be seen by our dispatches that W. C. Fellows & Co., and Swinney, Greene, & Co., of New Orleans, have failed.

☞This morning (Tuesday) at 10 o'clock, S. G. Henry & Co. will sell, for cash, caps, ready-made clothing, &c. Also, at 11 o'clock, on four months' credit, by order of the marshal, the stock of a clothing merchant, consisting of ready-made clothing, cassimeres, trimmings, and fixtures. Sale positive and without reserve.

☞We are indebted to Mr. Frank Tryon, agent of the American Express Company, for papers in advance of the mail.

Geo. W. Curtis, Esq.—We know that our readers will be delighted when we tell them that Geo. W. Curtiss, Esq., the talented author of "Howadji in Syria," "Nile Notes," "Lotus Eating," and that piquant and most witty satire upon what Wirt would call the lignum apis aristocracy of New York city, "The Potiphar Papess," is to deliver a lecture this evening before the Young Men's Christian Association, at the Second Presbyterian Church, on Third street.

We need hardly bespeak a full house for the Howadji, because we are persuaded that every one who has read any of his exceedingly beautiful works will seize the present opportunity of hearing from the lecturer himself that flow of wit, satire, and poetry for which he is already so widely known and admired.

The subject of this evening's lecture is "Gold and Gilt in Young America."

☞A change took place in the running arrangements of the Jeffersonville railroad to-day. The first train now leaves at 6:30 A. M.; the second at 9 o'clock A. M.; and the third at 1:15 P. M. The nine o'clock train is the only one that connects with the Ohio and Mississippi train, and is a special one for the Cincinnati business.

The train leaves Cincinnati at 10 A. M. and arrives here at 4 P. M.

Steamboat Notices.—The large steamer L. M. Kennett, Capt. Buffinger, arrived from New Orleans last night. We are indebted to Mr. Hutchison, her attentive clerk, for New Orleans papers of the 6th and copies of the manifest and memorandum. The Kennett leaves for New to-morrow.

The fine new steamer Rapides leaves for New Orleans to-day.

The Telegraph No. 3 is the mailboat for Cincinnati to-day.

The Rescue, a very excellent little boat, is up for Nashville to-day.

We are indebted to the Memphis for late Memphis papers. She passed the Jas. Robb at Cairo.

☞The river was still rising slowly yesterday with about 5 feet 9 inches water in the canal. The weather has moderated very much.

The Cumberland river was still rising at Nashville on Friday.

☞At St. Louis there were received on Thursday, 35,929 sacks and 168 barrels grain, 826 barrels pork, 807 barrels whisky, 201 barrels and tierces lard, 138 barrels flour, and 180 barrels beef.

Suicide.—Coroner White held an inquest on Saturday on the body of Wm. Griffith. The jury rendered a verdict that the deceased committed suicide by taking laudanum. The following prescription was found in his pocket: 1 ounce of gum guacum, 1 ounce of ground cloves, 1 ounce of ground cinnamon, and 2 ounces laudanum in a one-ounce vial. Griffith resided on Main street, between Brook and Floyd. He was married. It is said that family troubles induced him to commit the deed.

☞A clerk in the Northfield (Vermont) post-office named Ruggles has been arrested for stealing money from letters. He confessed his guilt and was committed.

☞We have received Frank Leslie's Ladies' Gazette of Fashions. It is an excellent number.

☞We have received from J. C. Derby, 119 Nassau street, New York, Wikoff's new novel, entitled "My Courtship and its Consequences." It is to be had at Morton & Griswold's.

☞The alarm of fire this morning proceeded from an unoccupied store on the north side of Market street, between Fourth and Fifth. It developed itself by a dense smoke, which arose from the cellar. When we left, the firemen were at work with every prospect of extinguishing it without serious loss.

The Ohio and Mississippi Railroad.—Alluding to the connection of Page & Bacon with this road, the Cincinnati Gazette of yesterday says:

The names of Page & Bacon, of St. Louis, have been so intimately connectted with the Ohio and Missippi Railroad enterprise from its commencement, and being the principal contractors on the western division of the line, the public may possibly regard the failure of that house as calculated to injure the interests of the Company. We learn, however, from very good authority, that the Company will lose nothing by the failure. The only funds belonging to the latter in the hands of Page & Bocon are held in trust for a specified purpose, and these, of course, will be regarded as sacred. Besides the Company hold near half a million dollars in stock belonging to Page & Bacon, that is due to them on account of work done under their contract. The failure may cause a temporary suspension of work on the western division of the road, but this can only be temporary, and otherwise the interests of the Company cannot suffer or be embarrassed to any considerable extent. The work on this division has so far progressed that a small sum will complete it. On the eastern division the work has also been pushed steadily forward, notwithstanding the pressure that has prevailed in the money market, and full eight per cent. of all the work, including the cost of the iron, has been done, and it will require less than one million dollars to complete the entire road from Cincinnati to St. Louis, and arrangements are now in progress, and partly completed, for securing this amount. It is evident, therefore, that the general affairs of the Company are in a good condition, and nothing is likely to occur to check the steady progress of this great enterprise. The citizens of Cincinnati should feel a lively interest in the affairs of the Company. The road must certainly prove of immense importance to the business of our city, and it is therefore desirable that nothing should occur to prevent its early completion.

Later From Texas.—The mail steamship Perseverance, Capt. Henry Place, arrived at New Orleans from Indianola and Galveston on the 6th. The San Antonio papers of the 28th ult. give full particulars of an attack made by the Indians on Dr. Geddings, of that city, and his party, while in charge of the mail train between San Francisco and El Passo:

It appears that on the 15th November, in the vicinity of the "Dead Man's Hole," not far from the Limpia, Dr. Geddings and the nine men under his command, in company with Col. Skellman and five men, were pursuing their journey, when about seventy-five Indians commenced the attack. The battle continued during the day without cessation, the Indians fighting with that spirit which is characteristic of them. The Indians were finally driven from their position, and in fact completely routed, horse and foot, and the little band came off masters of the field. Seven of the Indians were killed, and ten wounded; and on the other side, we believe, the damage was four mules killed.

At the San Antonio civic election, on the 25th ult., the Know Nothing candidates were elected.

The Nueces Valley contradicts a statement made some weeks ago to the effect that thirty recruits for the U. S. army had deserted at Aransas, and from four to eight drowned on board a lighter.

NEWS ITEMS.

Naval.—The United States Frigate San Jacinto arrived at Gibraltar on the 12th of December, from Spain.

☞The annual meeting of the Kentucky Colonization Society will be held at the Presbyterian church, in Frankfort, on Thursday evening, January 25th, at 8 o'clock. The annual address will be read, and several addresses will be made.

An Elocutionist in Limbo.—We notice that "Prof. Charles Whitney," well known as a lecturer upon elocution, and for his entertainments, has been arrested in Detroit for passing counterfeit money. Upon searching his baggage, $200 in $20 gold pieces were found, two $4 bills on the Bank of Bennington, broke, a $1 bill on the Railroad Bank, Adrian, broke, a $1 counterfeit bill on the Northern Bank of Kentucky, and a $5 bill on the Bank of Bennington. It would seem from the above inventory, that he was pretty well supplied with the means of making a speculation out of bad money.

Shipping in Port.—There are now in port no fewer than 250 sea-going vessel, to-wit: 160 ships, 7 steamships, 52 barks, and 11 schooners. These are exclusive of a large number of schooners and small craft engaged in the lake and coasting trade.—N. O. Pic., 6th.

BY THE BALTIC.

[Correspondence of the London Herald.]

THE STATE OF EUROPE.

London, Friday, Dec. 29, 1854.

From the English papers you can scarcely form an idea of the gloom which pervades society. Many aristocratic families are in mourning for their relatives who have perished in the Crimea by the sword of the enemy, or by fearful disease; and the letters of the survivors are so frightful that they are kept back from publicity in order to prevent a panic. Still, the public mind is sufficiently prepared for some dreadful disaster looming in the near future. The mismanagement of the expedition is palpable enough, and the mortality in the camp and at Balaklava, arising from sheer neglect and want of organizing talent, excites the indignation of the people against Lord Raglan and all the Crimean Generals, and against the Duke of Newcastle and his red-tapists and routiniers. The French camp, with its cleanliness, with its huts and earth-holes, and with its spacious and well-provided hospitals, forms the most striking contrast to the misery of the English camp, and leaves no room for the excuse that the hardships of the English army could not be prevented. The English have in their present campaign already lost their reputation for being a practical and well-administered nation; their governing classes, their aristocracy, have been found wanting in organizing talent, in foresight, and in business-like conduct; but a heavier blow threatens them now, which must lower them, and destroy their prestige with the bulk of the nation, and this comes from the fact that they show a lamentable deficiency in point of endurance.

All those gallant officers, who at the Alma and at Balaklava rushed into death with readiness, are now seeking a pretext for their return to the comforts of England. They wish to sell their commissions, or to retire on half-pay, because they cannot live in rags, upon half rations, unprotected against the drenching rain in the mud of the camp. It is true that they believe all those intolerable hardships might have been easily obviated by more capacity in the Commander-in-Chief and more order in his staff. They have lost their confidence in the success of the operations, and feel that their health and their lives are sacrificed to the imbecility of septuagenarian Generals. Still, the nation will charge them with cowardice for deserting the post of danger. I send you extracts from the correspondence of the camp; and I can assure you they are selected at random; and the worst descriptions of the misery have not appeared in public, but are privately communicated, because they contain a too severe criticism of the commanders. It canot be disguised that Sebastopol, after a siege of ten weeks, is far stronger than it was on the first day when the allies arrived at Balaklava, and that it is altogether impossible to reduce it by bombardment, while an assault becomes, day by day, more dangerous. The truth has likewise oozed out as to the battle of Balaklava. It was not in the wanton destruction of the Light Division only that the battle was disastrous for the English. It was a real strategical defeat, since the command of the road from Balaklava to Sebastopol fell into the hands of Gen. Liprandi, just at the time when it was too late to construct another road

From that day began the difficulties of the English, though in the first fortnight they were scarcely aware of their precarious position, as the rain had not yet destroyed the possibility of communication across the fields. But when, on the 14th of November, the storm and rain visited the camp, and the soil was converted into a bog, they began to see what they had lost on the 25th of October. The communication with Balaklava, the basis of operations, could only be maintained at an awful loss of life and the sacrifice of nearly all the beasts of burden, and no change is to be hoped for up to the time when the frost sets in, which, however, will again bring reinforcements to the Russians. The ministerial papers continue to hold out hopes of a speedy capture of Sebastopol, but the ministers do not seem to share these hopes—they have just sent out an expedition of railway laborers to Balaklava, to construct a train road between the port and the camp; it is to be ready by the end of February—the capture of the fortress, therefore, seems to be still further off.

As to the hopes of peace in consequence of the treaty of December 2, they grow fainter and fainter.

State of things Before Sebastopol.—The following graphic descriptions are taken from the leading articles and the correspondence of the principal London papers, and from private letters lately arrived from the Crimea:

There is no use disguising the matter. We are not speaking of our own correspondence only. We are not saying what we think alone. We say, on the evidence of every letter that has been received in this country, and we echo the opinion of almost every experienced soldier or well-informed gentleman, when we say that the noblest army England ever sent from these shores has been sacrificed to the grossest mismanagement.

Incompetency, lethargy, aristocratic hauteur, official indifference, favor, routine, perverseness, and stupidity reign, revel, and riot in the camp before Sebastopol, in the harbor of Balaklava, in the hospitals of Scutari, and how much nearer home we do not venture to say. We say it with the extremest reluctance, no one sees or hears anything of the Commander-in-Chief. Officers who landed on the 14th of September, and have been incessantly engaged in all the operations of the siege, are not even acquainted with the face of their commander.

In the officer and the private alike we find a quiet, resigned, unimpassioned conviction that the whole affair is bungled in the most hopeless and horrible manner. Every body perceives it in his own state, in the fate of his comrades, in the condition of the camp, and in the progress of the siege. Do any of the letters, or any of the regimental officers returned from the war, give a different account? On the contrary, does it not come within everybody's knowledge, as it does in ours, that the letters handed about in private circles, and not published, lest they should prejudice the writer in the eyes of his superiors, give a far more gloomy account than any letters that we have ventured to publish?

The burden is forced upon us, and we must speak out. The period for good nature is over in the Crimea, and sterner qualities must now be invoked into action, unless we would throw away the last chance that remains for redeeming the character of this country, now in fearful jeopardy. Send out men who will save the army—not from the Russians, though they are formidable enough, but from despair, which is weighing down the spirits of every one, and an utter distrust in the arrangement of the expedition. It will be of little use to send out re-enforcements by thousands unless we take steps for their better management. As it is, they march to their graves, and begin to perish by scores from the hour they land. Misrule receives them on the beach, and wearies them, worries them, drenches them, shivers them, and so destroys them, till a few spectral figures are all that remain. The soldiers of the peninsula, when they saw the Duke of Wellington after an absence, used to exclaim that his face did them more good than the arrival of ten regiments. Such a head, or coadjutors equivalent to it, is what we want for the Crimea.

[From Mr. Russell, the Times correspondent.]

Before Sabastopol, Nov. 26.

The Stromboli has arrived in Balaklava harbor from the fleet, carrying 13 32-pounders from the armament of the Britannia, and the Firebrand came in this afternoon with 24 guns of the same description, and about 60 tons weight of shot and shell.

Our cavalry is at present employed in feeding itself. It is all they have to do. The men are sent down with their horses from the camp to the waterside every day, and carry back their fodder and rations. It is perfectly disgraceful to see on this, the 12th day after the gale, trusses of compressed hay floating about and rotting in every direction in the harbor, while our horses are dying of sheer inanition. Scandalous neglect and indifference to the interests of the public service are chargeable somewhere or another in this matter. The compressed hay would have kept sweet for many days had it been fished out even within the week after it floated out of the wrecks. But, no; the fodder floated and bobbed about, stranded on the fringe of unutterable abominations and corruptions by the beach, floated off again, and rotted and sank, and stinks and rots, while the animals are half starving.

Dec. 4.—The whole plateau on which stands "the camp before Sebastopol"—the entire angle of land from Balaklava round to Kherson, and thence to the Valley of Inkermann—is fitted, at this moment, for the reception and delectation of any number of ichthyosauri, sauri, and crocodiles; it is a vast, black, dreary wilderness of mud, dotted with little lochs of foul water, and seamed by dirty brownish and tawny-colored streams, running down to and along the ravines.

"Chaos has come again," or rather has just departed from the scene. A grand plateau of bog, varying in depth from a foot to two feet, extends from the Valley of Inkermann to the sea at Balaklava. It is troodden into holes, in every direction, by the hoofs of mules, horses, and camels. It is scarred deeply by the wheels of carts and arabas, and the white tents dotting its surface, and a few scattered white farm-houses, and the snug quarters of Lord Raglan contrast strongly with the black profound amid which they rear their straight outlines. All over its surface are strewed the carcasses of horses and miserable animals, torn by dogs and smothered in mud. Vultures sweep over the mounds in flocks; carrion crows and "birds of prey obscene" hover over their prey, menace the hideous dogs who are feeding below, or sit in gloomy dyspepsia, with drooped head and dropped wing, on the remnants of their banquet.

It is over this ground, gained at last by great toil and exhaustion, and loss of life on the part of the starving beasts of burden, that man and horse have to struggle from Balaklava for some four or five miles, with the hay and corn, the meat, the biscuit, the pork, which form the subsistence of our army. Every day this toil must be undergone, for we are fed indeed by daily bread, and only get half rations of it. Horses drop exhausted on the road, and their loads are removed and added to the burdens of the struggling survivors; then, after a few efforts to get out of their Slough of Despond, the poor brutes succumb and lie down to die in their graves. Men wade and plunge about, and stumble through the mud, with muttered imprecations, or sit down on a projecting stone, exhausted, pictures of dirt and woe unutterable. Sometimes on the route the overworked and sickly soldier is seized with illness, and the sad aspect of a fellow-countryman dying before his eye shocks every passer-by—the more because aid is all but hopeless and impossible. Officers in huge sailors' boots, purchased at Balaklava for about five times their proper price, trudge on earnestly in the expectation of being able to carry back to their tents the pot of preserved meat or the fowl, bought at a fabulous cost in that model city of usurydom, ere the allotted portion of wood under the cooking tins has been consumed.

The siege operations have been sometimes completely—sometimes partially—suspended, and the attack on Sebastopol has languished and declined. Neither guns nor ammunition could be brought up to the batteries.

The Russians have been emboldened by our inactivity to crawl about at nights, and beat up the advanced posts. It is no wonder that men who may have carried a considerable load from Balaklava to the camp, and who may be sent out after a scanty meal to pass twelve hours in a ditch, sometimes are less vigilant than they ought to be for the safety of the army. In some such way was it that the picquets of the 50th was surprised the other night in front of the right attack, and indeed report says that some of the men were bayonetted by the Russians as they lay in their blankets.

The mortality among the Turks has now assumed all the dimensions of a plague. Every sense was offended and shocked by the display, day after day, in the streets of processions of men bearing half-covered corpses on litters at the busiest hour of the day; and Col. Daveney at last gave orders, or rather granted permission that the Turks should bury their dead on the hill-side, over the town. Yesterday, ere evening, upward of seventy bodies were carried to their long home, and deposited in shallow graves, not above a few inches deep, and were left with a shovelfull or two of earth and pebbles over them, as close together as they could be packed. To-day the same process is going on. I can count thirty-five bodies already on the ground, and it is early in the day; over the hillside come men bearing more litters. As the result of such a mode of burial would be the outbreak of some all-destroying pestilence, the commandant of the place has ordered it to be discontinued, and the Turks must in future bury their dead outside the town in the valley, in graves four feet deep.

December 5.—The works of our new attack have been completed and are now awaiting their armament. Owing to the cessation of rain, we have been enabled to get up to the artillery park five guns of positions and three thirteen-inch mortars.

The number of applications sent to Lord Raglan for leave to retire, to sell out, or to go on half-pay is said to be very great. The Duke of Wellington had to contend against the same evil in Spain.

THE EMPEROR'S SPEECH.

Gentlemen Senators and Deputies:

Since our last meeting, great events have happened. The appeal which I made to the country to cover the expenses of the war was so well responded to that the result even surpassed our hopes. Our arms have been victorious in the Baltic and in the Black Seas. Two great battles have shed luster upon our flag. Striking testimony has proved the intimacy of our relations with England. The British Parliament has voted thanks to our generals and soldiers. A great empire, re-invigorated by the chivalrous spirit of its sovereign, has separated itself from the power which for forty years has menaced the independence of Europe. The Emperor of Austria has concluded a treaty, defensive at present, soon perhaps offensive, which unites his cause to that of France and England. Thus, gentlemen, the longer the war continues, the more numerous becomes the number of our allies, and the closer are drawn the bonds already formed. What firmer bonds can there in fact be than those bearing the names of victories belonging to the two armies, and recalling a common glory; than the same anxieties and the same hopes agitating the two countries; than the same views and the same intentions animating the two governments in every corner of the globe?

Thus the alliance with England is not the result of a passing interest and of a policy of circumstance; it is the union of two powerful nations associated together for the triumph of a cause in which for more than a century their greatness, the interest of civilization, and at the same time the liberty of Europe are engaged.

Unite then with me in this solemn occasion to thank here in the name of France the British Parliament for its cordial and warm demonstration, and the English army and its worthy commander for their worthy cooperation.

Next year, if peace should not have been re-established, I hope that I shall have to render similar thanks to Germany, the union and prosperity of which we desire.

I am happy to pay a just tribute of praise to the army and to the fleet, which, by their devotion and discipline, have worthily responded to my expectations, in France as in Algeria, in the north as in the south. Up to the present moment the army of the East has had to suffer and has overcome everything—disease, fire, tempest, and privations—a citadel incessantly re-provisioned, defended by a formidable artillery by land and sea—two hostile armies, superior in numbers. Nothing could weaken its courage or impede its impetuosity. Every man has nobly done his duty, from the marshal who bid death wait till victory had crowned him, down to the privates and sailors, whose last cry in expiring was a prayer for France—an exclamation for the elect of the country. Let us then declare together that the army and the fleet have well deserved of their country. War, it it is true, entails cruel sacrifices, yet everything commands me to push it on with vigor, and with that object in view I count upon your assistance.

The land army consists at present of 581,000 soldiers and 113,000 horses, the navy of 62,000 sailors on board ship.

It is indispensable to keep up this effective force. To fill up the vacancies caused by annual liberations and war, I shall request from you, as I did last year, a levy of 140,000 men, and a bill will be laid before you to ameliorate (without increasing the expenses of the treasury) the condition of the soldiers who will reengage. It will afford immense advantages by increasing the number of old soldiers in the army, and by diminishing the oppression of conscription. This bill will, I hope, soon have your approbation.

I shall ask your authority to conclude a new national loan. Doubtless such a measure will increase the national debt, but let it not be forgotten, that, by my conversion of the Rente, the interest of that debt has been reduced twenty-one millions and a half. My efforts have been directed to place the expenses on a footing with the receipts, and the ordinary budget will be presented to you balanced. The resources of the loan alone will suffice for the expenses of the war.

You will see with pleasure that our revenues have not diminished. Commercial activity is maintained—all the great works of public utility are continued—and Providence has deigned to grant us a harvest which will satisfy all our wants.

Government nevertheless does not shut its eye to the distress occasioned by the high price of provisions, and has taken every measure in its power to provide against this distress and relieve it. New sources of labor have been created in many districts.

The struggle which is going on, circumscribed by moderation and justice, whilst it makes the heart beat, nevertheless alarms so little, that shortly an assembly will be held here from all parts of the globe, with the products of peace. Strangers will be struck by the remarkable spectacle of a country which, counting on divine Providence, maintains with energy a war at 600 leagues from its frontiers, and which at the same time with equal zeal develops its internal riches; a country which does not prevent agriculture and industry from prospering, the arts from flourishing—and where the genius of the nation reveals itself in everything which tends to the glory of France.

Distressing Shooting Affair.—Last night, about 10 o'clock, a shocking affair, which will probably result in death, took place in front of the National theater. The circumstances of the case, as near as we could learn, are as follows: Mr. Chas. Ormsby, one of the head clerks in the National Telegraph, is engaged to be married to a highly respectable young lady of this city; and, understanding that a young man named Thomas Jennings, son of M. C. Jennings, merchant tailor, Main street, had circulated reports calculated to reflect upon the character of his betrothed, proceeded to the theater, where young Jennings was invited by him out of doors.

Ormsby asked Jennings if he had made his boasts in public that he had seduced Miss ——. Jennings replied, "I did;" whereupon Ormsby drew a pistol, and placing it to Jennings's head, fired. The pistol was so close to his face that the explosion tore off a portion of his upper lip and shattered his nose. The wounded man was immediately conveyed to the Woodruff House, and the assistance of Drs. Foster and Wood called, but, unto a late hour, it was not ascertained where the ball had lodged, and the condition of Jennings was such as to render his recovery very doubtful.

Deputy Marshal John Gray was within a few feet of the parties when the occurrence took place, and instantly arrested Ormsby. He made no resistance, and on his way to the station-house stated to the officer that Jennings had seduced his wife, and admitted that he shot him. He further said, "I do not care if I am hung—he has ruined me." He gave up the pistol, and on arriving at the station-house fainted, and after being restored was locked up to await an examination, which will probably take place to-morrow morning.

Both Ormsby and Jennings are young men, are well known in the city, and are of the highest respectability.—Cin. Enq., Jan. 14.

Her consignees are Duncan, Sherman, & Co., $328,000; Adams & Co., $118,000; Wells & Fargo, $51,000; W. Leberman, $25,000; Newhouse & Spotts, Philadelphia, $10,000. She connected with the Cortes, which left San Francisco on the 23d.

Matters in Central America are unchanged since our last advices.

The Uncle Sam arrived at San Francisco on the 20th.

The committee appointed by the railroad meeting at San Francisco had decided on a route across the plains as the most practicable means of securing the speedy completion of the work. The Legislature will probably be called upon to make an appropriation for this purpose.

The city marshall of Oakland, John Hogan, has absconded with $20,000 of the city funds.

The question as to the State Capitol is about to be decided. Sacramento will doubtless be the place.

Miss Sarah Pellet has declared her intention of taking out 5,000 respectable New England girls to California.

Henry Renison, a policeman of San Francisco, was stabbed by Elizabeth Sullivan, with whom he had been cohabiting, and had deserted for the purpose of getting married.

James McCabe, known as "Judge McCabe," was stabbed by David B. Akey, for having made dishonorable proposals to his wife. It is thought that he will recover.

The New Englanders celebrated Forefathers' day with a dinner at Wilson's Exchange. Mayor Webb presided.

Rain was much needed. In some places cattle and vegetation were suffering.

Immense quantities of dirt had been thrown up by the miners, and good judges looked for a larger yield of gold, in the event of heavy rains, than was ever before realized.

The largest portion of the town of Valleitto was destroyed by fire on the 21st. The details of the fire had not reached San Francisco. When the steamer left, Dalheyney and John B. Walker were the heaviest losers. Their entire stock, valued at $12,000, was destroyed. It was probably the work of an incendiary.

Business was excessively dull, and no improvement was anticipated until the rains.

THIRTY-THIRD CONGRESS—SECOND SESSION.

Tuesday's Proceedings.

Washington, Jan. 15.

Senate.—Mr. Brodhead—I move the Senate consider the first resolution in favor of the relief of the Arctic expedition. There are special reasons for it.

Mr. Gwinn, from the select committee on the Pacific Railroad, proposed two substitutes for the bills.

Mr. Broadhead again asked the consideration of the Arctic expedition resolution, and it was taken up.

Mr. Hunter objected to its passage, on the ground that the search for Kane would lead to the loss of more lives from the uncertainty of the position of the Arctic expedition.

Mr. Mallory explained that Dr. Kane had made arrangements by monuments and signals, so that, if lost, his track and route could be discovered.

Mr. Hunter acquiesced, after Mr. Mallory's explanation, and the joint resolution was passed.

Mr. Dodge, of Iowa, from the committee on lands, reported back the bill establishing a land district in Florida, which was read and passed.

The ocean mail appropriation bill, which failed last session, was taken up and debated.

The ocean mail steamer bill was debated, and finally postponed indefinitely.

The Senate went into executive session, and shortly after adjourned.

House.—Mr. Letcher brought before the House the question of privilege in relation to W. B. Chase refusing to give testimony before a select committee appointed last session to investigate whether money or other improper means had been used to influence the passage or defeat of bills, and asked for a process to compel Chase to answer questions.

Some debate took place, when a further consideration of the matter was postponed.

The House then went into committee on the Pacific Railroad bill.

Mr. Stephens, of Ga., made a speech to show the great superiority of slave labor in Georgia, over free labor in Ohio, and advocated the acquisition of Cuba.

Mr. Boyce strongly opposed the acquisition, and said it was inexpedient in every point of view.

Philadelphia, Jan. 13.

The watchman of the Farmers' Bank, Mount Holly Jersey, was found this morning at six o'clock, gagged and tied in the bank. He says that on entering the building at 9 o'clock last evening, he was seized, bound, and gagged by four men who had previously entered. He remained in that situation all night. It is presumed that money has been stolen, but amount unknown when informant left.

New York, Jan. 13.—Second Dispatch.—The robbers were in the bank from nine in the evening until three this morning, but did not succeed in getting the vault open, nor did they carry any money away with them.

Governor Gardiner has issued a proclamation, in compliance with the act of Congress on the ject, ceding to the State of New York that part of Massachsetts known as Boston Corners.

Robert Maywood, formerly an actor of some celerity in this city, was yesterday sent to the Lunatic Asylum. It appears that Mr. Maywood has but lately arrived from Trieste, Austria, where he had been living in great affluence with his daughter, Miss Augusta Maywood, a danseuse of some celebrity in Italy and Germany. It is said she has a villa on Lake Como worth half a million dollars. Mr. Maywood arrived here in the ship Virginia, and has manifested symptoms of aberation of intellect.

WEEKLY REVIEW OF THE MARKET.

Louisville, Tuesday, Jan. 16, 1855.

Remarks.—Trade in a small way has been quite lively the past week, but very few actual wholesale transactions have taken place. There still continues to be a total absence of all speculation, and dealers confine their purchases to immediate wants.

A decided change for the better has taken place in money matters, but we are sorry to say that there is now danger of matters getting worse again. Within the last day or two the telegraph has brought rumors of heavy failures of houses in St. Louis and New Orleans, which, from their extensive connections throughout the country, will be more or less felt.

The only feature worthy of particular note in the general market is the great dullness in provisions, but in the absence of any transactions our former quotations are continued. There is no longer any doubt that the deficiency in the crop is very large, and that, adding even the surplus remaining over from last year, the total will not exceed the crop of '52 and '53, which was not then in excess of consumption. The present low prices are brought about partly by the pressure in the money market, which has put a stop to all purchases on speculation, and partly that the product is held by many outside parties—parties who bought hogs, and not getting the price they calculated upon, packed them on their own account, expecting to realize more advantageously from the product. They were not prepared however to hold the product, and, as their bills are maturing, are compelled to sell to meet them. We have not the least doubt that prices will eventually advance, and those that hold on will get a fair remuneration.

Tobacco is very firm, with prices constantly tending upward. Whisky has been fluctuating. Iron and hemp are lower.

Southern freights have declined further and are scarce.

The receipts of merchandise are exceedingly light as compared with former seasons.

The river is rising slowly. The falls are not navigable, but the Ohio throughout its entire length, as well as all its tributaries, and the Mississippi are in good navigable condition.

The weather in the forepart of the week was rainy. It was followed by a very cold spell. Yesterday it moderated and was pleasant.

Our quotations apply only to wholesale transactions, unless otherwise specified. We wish our country readers to bear this particularly in mind.

Bagging and Bale Rope.—With the exception of one sale of 250 pieces bagging at 14c the business of the week has been altogether of a retail character for plantation orders. These transactions aggregate probably 250 pieces and 250 coils at prices ranging from 14 to 15c and 8 to 8½c, usual terms—the outside figures only for very best brands.

Brooms.—Common $2; Ky. Shaker (Bryant's make) $2 75; Eastern Shaker $2 50@$2 75 ℔ doz., for lots. Retail sales 15 to 25c ℔ doz. higher.

The sales during the week have been altogether in very light lots. Wheat continues firm at $1 50. Corn and oats are unchanged; for the former dealers have continued to pay 63@65c, delivered in store, and for the latter 43c. Groceries.—The only article in this department in which we notice any change is coffee, prices of which have further declined, and the ruling prices for fair to good Rio by the quantity now range from 10 to 10¼c and in small lots to the country from 10½ to 11c. This market is lower than any other. At Baltimore the stock is reduced to 10,000 bags and it is quoted at 9¾@10c and firm. The shipments of coffee from Rio, during the month of November, were 176,422 bags, of which 86,684 were to the United States—10,627 to Baltimore, 3,050 to Charleston, 46,962 to New Orleans, 22,444 to New York, and 4,201 to Philadelphia. Small sales of Java at 15c. Sales of 175 hhds sugar during the week at 4¾ to 5¼c for good to prime old and new. Sales in bbls at 5½ to 6c. Sales of refined at previous quotations. Molasses continues to be of slow sale. We only notice light sales—prime plantation in good cooperage commanding 20c and in half bbls at 22c. Rice we quote at 6½ to 7c, according to quantity.

Glass.—In limited quantities we quote country 8X10 at $2, 10X12 at $3 75, and 12X14 at $4 25.

Gunny Bags.—No sales. The last transaction was at 12c, 60 days.

Hemp.—Prices have declined, brought about mainly by an improved state of navigation to St. Louis. We noticed sales from store of 40 bales at $123@$127 and 36 bales at $133. Manufacturers are now offering $115@$120 for crops of Kentucky.

Hay.—Sales from the wharf at $13 to dealers for timothy. Sales from store at $14 50@$15 ℔ ton.

Hides.—Dealers are paying to the city butchers 5c and for country 4½c. For dry hides dealers are paying and they are selling at 10@11c.

Iron.—We reduce our figures so as to correspond with present rates. Only small sales of No. 1 Tennessee hot-blast have been made at $35, 4 mos., and now quote as the range $30@$35, according to quality. Bar iron has declined to 3½ and 4½c for common and charcoal blast.

Nails.—We notice a further decline, and now quote 10d's by the quantity from first hands at $4 12½; other sizes in proportion. Small lots to the country at $4 50.

Lead and Shot.—Missouri shot $2 00 ℔ bag. Pig and bar lead at 7c for the former and 7¼c for the latter.

Naval Stores.—We now quote rosin at $3@$3 25, according to quality; pitch at $4 25, and tar at $5 50 in small bbls and $6 50 in large bbls. Turpentine 55@60c.

Oils.—Linseed from the mill in lots 75c; from store 80c. Pure castor oil we quote at 90c@$1 ℔ gallon by the quantity. Sperm oil $1 85@$1 95. Tanners' oil $25, $26, and $27 ℔ bbl, according to quality. Lard oil 75c in lots.

Provisions and Lard.—We have elsewhere spoken of the provision market, and have now only to add the actual transactions that took place. Sales of 135 bbls mess pork at $12, 125 bbls at the same, and 94 bbls at $12 50. These are all the transactions that have come to our knowledge. The market closes very dull. In bacon, sales of about 75 casks in small lots on Southern orders at 6, 7¾, and 9c for shoulders, clear sides, and hams, and 37,000 lbs smoked pork-house shoulders at 5½c. In lard, the only considerable transaction that has been made was 150,000 lbs grease at 7¼c. For prime in bbls and tierces 8¾c has been offered and refused. The stock of pork beef at Bozart & Holmes's inspection warehouse in New Orleans on the 1st inst. was 4,825 bbls pork, of which 3,544 bbls were not inspected and 825 bbls mess; and of beef 180 bbls, 380 hf bbls, and 23 tierces.

Potatoes and Onions.—Potatoes firm at $4 00 ℔ bbl for Neshannocks, which dealers are paying for lots. They sell at $4 25. Onions we now quote at $1 75 ℔ bbl. in large lots from the wharf.

Salt.—Kanawha we quote at 50c. A sale of 1,500 sacks Turks Island at 50c.

Starch.—We quote 8½ to 9c.

Tobacco.—This staple, in spite of the depression in everything else, continues not only to maintain firmness, but is gradually advancing. The shortness of the crop has brought about this result. We have the annual circular of Messrs. Messenger, of New York, before us. Their tables show a decrease in stocks at the principal seaports in this country and in Europe of 39,508 hhds, as compared with last year. They estimate the growth of 1854 as follows, giving the outside figures:

Kentucky 50,000; Virginia 55,000; Maryland 23,000; Ohio 10,000. Total, 138,000 hhds. Present estimated quantity of old tobacco in Kentucky, 8,000 hhds.

We quote old shipping lugs at $5 25 to $5 50, old medium shipping $6 to $7, and manufacturing $7 to $9. The new tobacco that is coming in is generally in bad condition, and some lugs in miscellaneous packages have sold as low as $4. When in shipping order they command $4 75 to $5. New medium in good shipping condition ranges from $5 50 to $6. The sales of the week are 174 hhds new numbers and 13 hhds reviews, and the following are the particulars:

Eastern exchange has been firm at 1 prem. New Orleans is scarce, but their is little demand for it. Some sales have been made out of doors at ⅛ to 1 prem. The banks are discounting.

There is no change in uncurrent funds. Kentucky and Missouri money par. Tennessee money, the old banks as well as the free banks, pass at par in the ordinary transactions, but are not bankable. The brokers charge on the Bank of Tennessee, the Planters', the Union Bank, and the Bank of Nashville 1 ℔ cent. dis. to their regular customers; and to others 1½ dis., and on all other sound banks 2 to 10 dis.

Indiana State Bank and branches are ⅛ dis. The paper of the Indiana free banks has almost gone out of circulation. It ranges from 1 to 25 ℔ cent. dis.

The State Bank of Ohio is 1 ℔ cent. dis. The Ohio free banks are 2 to 5 ℔ cent. dis.

The following are our latest advices from abroad in regard to money matters:

Money continues to improve. Wall street and its habitudes wear a cheerful aspect. Borrowers are better satisfied, and stocks continue to rise. The market value of money now ranges from 10 to 12 ℔ cent. for short and medium dates of prime paper, and 12@15 for long dates and second class, while call loans are easy at 7 per cent.

The stock market exhibited great activity to-day, and a general advance was realized on sales.

The market closed with an upward tendency.

The European commercial advices are held to be rather favorable. The money market is reported without change. The exchanges however between England and the Continent had fallen a little, and a demand had set in for the export of gold to export to the Continent. The French loan of 500,000,000 francs was expected to draw some money from England, and the advices from New York, of the fall in exchange here, led to the fear that gold might be shipped to this port. Exchange, however, has not yet fallen low enough. Consols were quoted at 91⅛ to 91¼. The Paris funds declined materially on the announcement of the new loan. The Bank of England's last return shows a slight further increase of specie.

The cotton market is reported steady, at a reduction of ⅛d in the price of previous quotations. The stock of American cotton in Liverpool was, as per count, 295,720 bales, being 40,000 bales less than the estimates. The whole stock was 551,350 bales. The market for breadstuffs is reported dull, and prices heavy. Provisions were buoyant.

Messrs. Baring Brothers & Co. write as follows respecting American stocks.

There have been purchases, to some extent, of Pennsylvania State bonds at 80; Virginia sterling 5 ℔ cent. bonds have been sold at 81@85, ex. div.; Central bonds 60; U. S. 6 ℔ cent. bonds, 1868, sellers at 106; Indiana State 70; Kentucky 6 ℔ cents, 90, ex. div.

New York Money Market, Jan. 15, M.

Flour is heavy, with sales of 4,500 bbls good Ohio at $9@$9 50; Southern is irregular at $9@$9 50. Corn is a trifle lower, with sales of 25,000 bushels Western mixed at $1 04. Pork easier, but not quotably lower—sales of 600 bbls mess at $12 25. Beef and lard are unchanged. Ohio whisky 39c. Coffee is active—sales of 1,500 bags Rio at 9¾@10c. Sugar is firm. Molasses—Orleans 25@27c. Linseed oil is firm at 82c.

New York Money Market, Jan. 15, P. M.

Money is unsettled. Stocks are firmer—Galena and Chicago 88. Cleveland and Toledo 58½, Virginia 6's 93¾, Missouri 6's 87¼, Canton 22¾, Cumberland 32½, Reading 72, New York Central 88¼, Erie 45½, Illinois Central 91¼.

Shipments of Breadstuffs from the United States to Europe.—The New York Shipping List furnishes a statement of the exports of breadstuffs from the United States to Europe from the 1st September to the 26th December, 1854, and for the same time in 1853, from which we make up the annexed comparative table:

FLOUR, 1854.	Barrels.
To England and Ireland	52,675
To the Continent	3,117
	55,795
Same time 1853	1,323,147
Decrease in 1854	1,277,452
WHEAT, 1854.	Bushels.
To Europe	138,627
Same time 1853	5,428,585
Decrease in 1854	5,289,958
CORN, 1854.	Bushels.
To England and Ireland	2,481,137
To the Continent	160,029
	2,641,166
Same time 1853	931,555
Increase in 1854	1,707,611

These comparisons show that the decrease in the exports of breadstuffs has been general. The figures also show that the stock of flour and wheat in the country must still be large, the acknowledged shortness of the crop not being equal to the reduction of our exports. Against this we, however, must set the fact, that the demand for our breadstuffs in 1853 began on a full stock, whilst at the opening of September, 1854, the quantity on hand, was much reduced.

Baltimore, Jan. 12.

Provisions.—There is a considerable stir in the market for meats for the English market and a good deal has been done. It is difficult to get the correct transactions as many of them are on private terms and neither party wish the figures known. There is no branch of business so difficult to quote as that of provisions. The qualities are numerous and the demand for the different markets requiring certain kinds of meats render quotations extremely various and difficult to state, so as to show the precise figures. What we can hear of we will give under their respective heads.

Bacon.—There is a good inquiry for new bacon, with sales of sides and shoulders at 7½c. Fair sales of old, according to the light stock, at 6¾c for shoulders and 6¾@7c for sides, and 11@11½c for hams.

Pork.—The market is unsettled, and accurate quotations difficult to ascertain. There has been a demand for English account and sales of several hundred barrels mess were made on private terms, and 1,000 barrels at $14 75. It is held by some at higher figures. Some lots of old mess brought $13 75@$14 and new $15.

Beef.—The principal sales have been to fill English orders on private terms.

Bulk Meat.—We hear of very little doing except in short middles for England, which have been sold principally at 7⅛c. We quote sides 6¾c, shoulders 6c, and hams 9c.

Lard.—There has been a good demand and a number of transactions reported, principally in tierces and barrels, at 9⅛c. It is generally held at 10c in bbls and 10⅛@11c in kegs.

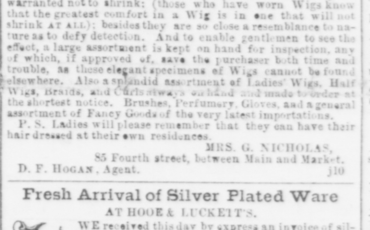
Wig Manufactory,



NO. 85 FOURTH STREET, BET. MAIN AND MARKET,

The Oldest Stand in Louisville.

MRS. G. NICHOLAS invites the attention of her customers and others to her newly-invented VENTILATING DIAMOND WIGS. These Wigs were invented by Richard Beck, of London, and made by one of the gentlemen in my establishment, who took the highest premium for the best Wigs on exhibition at the Industrial Exhibition, London, in 1851. They are warranted not to shrink; (those who have worn Wigs know that the greatest comfort in a Wig is in one that will not shrink at all); besides they are so close a resemblance to nature as to defy detection. And to enable gentlemen to see the effect, a large assortment is kept on hand for inspection, any of which, if approved of, save the purchaser both time and trouble, as those elegant specimens of Wigs cannot be found elsewhere. Also a splendid assortment of Ladies' Wigs, Half Wigs, Braids, and Curls always on hand and made to order at the shortest notice. Brushes, Perfumery, Gloves, and a general assortment of Fancy Goods of the very latest importations.

P. S. Ladies will please remember that they can have their hair dressed at their own residences.

Zerman's Celebrated Tooth Wash.

THIS delicious article combines so many meritorious qualities that it has now become a standard favorite with the citizens of New York, Philadelphia, and Baltimore. Dentists prescribe it in their practice most successfully, and from every course the most flattering laudations are awarded it.

Inflamed and bleeding gums are immediately benefitted by its use. Its action upon them is mild, soothing, and effective. It cleanses the teeth so thoroughly that they are made to rival pearl in whiteness, and diffuses through the mouth such a delightful freshness that the breath is rendered exquisitely sweet. It disinfects all those impurities which tend to produce decay, and, as a consequence, when these are removed, the teeth must always remain sound.

Prepared only by FRANCIS ZERMAN, Chemist, Ninth and Catherine streets, Philadelphia, and sold, wholesale and retail, by RAYMOND & PATTEN, Louisville, n24 d3m* and by all druggists, at 25 cents per bottle.
